

The Bright Side of Indigenous Urbanization for Biodiversity

Submitted by AA [1] on 11 February, 2015 - 10:00

Over time, cities originated wherever indigenous cultures agglomerated and planned links between their settlements and peri-urban ecosystems for the provision of water, food and other goods and services. Not by coincidence, these settlements often occurred in biodiversity hotspots.

read more [2]

Broadcast

by: http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/sustainablecitiescollective_allposts/~3/EwNasXAGy... [3]

Architect Africa Network Search: